

A FIGHTING CHANCE

For the Burdick Bill, and Its Friends Have Not Given Up the Struggle.

STILL BENT ON BUSINESS.

The First Move in an Effort to Get It Before the House.

A VERY BAD PIECE OF POLITICS

is What Ex-Senator Lee Calls the Action of the Committee.

SOME BREEZY SCENES AT THE HEARING

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 20.—The Standard Oil Company's magnates, attracted to the State Capitol yesterday by the hearing on the Burdick bill, which proposed to materially cut down the rates charged by the National Transit Company for the transportation and storage of oil, left the city to-day greatly delighted with the prompt action of the House Committee on Corporations in voting to report it negatively by a decisive majority.

The Standard Oil Trust, the largest of the National Transit, had concentrated its best speaking talent here to point out the disastrous effects which it is alleged would flow from the proposed legislation, but it had hardly anticipated the overwhelming victory it achieved.

The friends of the bill are much chagrined that they should have been knocked out so easily. But while the first round in the fight for lower tolls was discouraging, they have firmly resolved to avail themselves of every parliamentary expedient to galvanize the bill into life. The action of the Committee on Corporations will be sustained by some members, who would have voted for the bill if the report had been favorable, but a greater number are nothing for the diecast of the committee, and will vote to place it on the calendar in defiance of its action.

Still Full of Fight.

They think the bill is of such great importance that it should have a wider discussion than the confines of a committee room, and will exert themselves to the utmost to give the House a chance to discuss it. Representative Burdick, the author of the bill, lost no time to-day in offering a resolution which seeks to nullify the action of the committee, by putting it in the position of bills reported with an affirmative recommendation. He is a popular member, and a considerable number of his associates will vote with him on that account. As a majority of the entire House is expected to support the work of a committee, 165 votes will be required to rescind the action of the committee.

Resolutions are considered only under the rules of the House on Monday and Friday, and on those days the attendance is generally meagre. On the other hand, the Burdick bill is placed at a decided disadvantage, but he has strong hopes of a successful issue.

Ex-Senator Lee, who was delegated by the oil producers to represent their interests here, thinks the adverse action on the Burdick bill was a very bad move, from a political standpoint, as a blow at the interests of the oil producers, which would be felt last November showed the power of these people when aroused.

Antagonizing the Oil Men.

All the counties in which petroleum is produced contribute to the deficit of the Delaware, because (Mr. Lee intimates), of his relations with the Standard Oil Company. If the Republicans wanted to make a state permit, they would have to be effectual way to attain the result was to pursue a policy like that which found expression in the defeat of the bill to secure reasonable rates for shipping oil through the State.

Representative Finley, of Washington, and Thompson, of Butler, much regretted the action of the Committee on Corporations, and the latter said the action he approved in his county with great dissatisfaction.

Representative Jones, of Venango county, who had that in view, as any good could flow from its operations.

Representative Hays, of Venango, thought the bill would be a disaster, as many members would vote to give it a shove before the House who are opposed to its passage.

In a discussion of the Burdick bill after midnight was conducted in the liveliest sort of a way. Dreezy verbal encounters between Emery and Archbold, and between Archbold and Lee, followed, and at one time it was feared by the committee that the present indignation of Lee over a statement made by the magnate of the Standard might result in dangerous and riotous scenes, and the Chairman interposed a resolute objection to the continuance of personalities.

Lee Turns on Archbold.

Lee had remarked that a representative of the great corporation had told him that the producers, by devoting the profits of 1,000,000 acres to the support of an interstate commerce bill, had forced the Standard to adopt a similar policy. Archbold informed Lee that such was not the case, when the latter turned on the Standard man and notified him that such reflections on his veracity would not be tolerated. Subsequent remarks of Archbold showed that he had misapprehended Lee's remarks as to the shutdown to limit production.

The Senate Committee held a short session this morning to consider the bill introduced by Senator McCrea, which is a copy of that negatived by the House Committee on Corporations. The attendance was small and no action was taken. The committee will probably await the action of the House on the resolution to place the bill on the calendar.

Several members of the committee interviewed say they are unable to give any idea as to the sentiment of a majority of its members.

BILLS REPORTED FAVORABLY.

Senator Penrose's Measure Amending the Corporation Act of 1874.

Senator Penrose's Measure Amending the Corporation Act of 1874.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 20.—Bills were reported favorably in the Senate regarding dealers in cigars to be licensed, and authorizing retail liquor licenses to be granted on the basis of population. Senator Flinn presented the reamendment of manufacturers of Pittsburgh against the passage of the Burdick bill.

Senator Penrose, Philadelphia, introduced a bill amending the Corporation Act of 1874, so as to authorize the incorporation of the companies engaged in the drygoods business.

BILLS DISPOSED OF.

A Number of Them Passed Finally by the Upper House.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 20.—In the Senate to-day the following bills were passed finally: Providing for printing of Sheriff's sales in a German newspaper; Senator Finley's bill, providing for the payment of the cost and expense of municipal improvements in cities; authorizing the election of chief burgess for three years; authorizing extension of corporate existence of any railroad corporation organized under general or special laws; House bill authorizing appointment of commission to revise mining and ventilation laws.

On motion of Senator Flinn, his bill providing for the lease of the property and franchises of street railway companies to motor power companies was amended by striking out the following: "That no lease shall be made of the property of the owners of three-fourths of the stock of the passenger railway company so leased."

SOME SOLDIER BILLS

THAT ARE MAKING OLD VETERANS IN THE SENATE WEARY.

The Chickamauga Measure Stirs Up a Spiced Debate.—It is Finally Defeated.—Senator Grady's Amusing War History.—Other Bills That Are Pending.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 20.—There was a spirited discussion in the Senate to-day on the bill appropriating $12,500 to mark the positions of Pennsylvania troops with monuments or tablets on the Chickamauga battlefield. The Standard Oil Trust, the largest of the National Transit, had concentrated its best speaking talent here to point out the disastrous effects which it is alleged would flow from the proposed legislation, but it had hardly anticipated the overwhelming victory it achieved.

Senator Grady created much amusement by his contradiction of the history of the battle of Chickamauga and other details of distinction fighting for the life of the Union on the Chickamauga battlefield who were hundreds of miles away, and his boldness in formed Republican collectors were obliged to see his recollections of war scenes. The bill was defeated, but Senator Grady changed his vote for the bill in order that he might move for a reconsideration.

Among other bills before the Legislature is one providing for medals, at an aggregate expense of $1,600, to be awarded to the first defenders of the Union during the late war.

Another bill provides that $75,000 be applied to the creation of equestrian statues to General Meade and Hancock at Gettysburg, and other similar statues, because of the distinction these heroes won, and because the statues are to be erected on Pennsylvania soil.

TWO MURDERERS' FATE.

The Governor Disposes of One and is Considering the Other.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 20.—Governor Pattison has directed the warden to be sent to the District Attorney of Washington county as to the physical condition of the murderer West, who, in communications submitted to the Governor, is represented to be a physical wreck and consequently not a fit subject to be hanged. The jail physician thinks four months will be required to restore him to a condition that would warrant his execution.

A short time since an application was made for the reprieve of Harry Marsh, of Cambria county, on the ground that he was a maniac. The Governor, after a hearing, the county was addressed as to the murderer's condition, and he wrote in reply that the court and jury had passed on his mental condition, and he was sane. The Governor accordingly refused to interfere with the execution of the death warrant. Marsh and West are to be executed on the 26th inst.

WORLD'S FAIR DISPLAY.

The Bill Providing for It Unanimously Passed by the Senate.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 20.—The Senate, by a unanimous vote, passed a bill appropriating $120,000 for the display of Pennsylvania products at the Chicago Exposition. The commission which is to disburse this money will consist of three persons to be appointed by the Governor, two by the Senate and two by the House. The members of the commission will be authorized to charge of the solicitation, collection, transportation, arrangement and exhibition of the objects to be displayed.

SHIP CANAL COMMISSION.

Resolution for a Review of Its Work by Government Engineers.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 20.—The following House resolution was concurred in by the Senate to-day: Resolved (the Senate concurring), That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be requested to secure the adoption of a resolution directing the Secretary of War to order a commission to be appointed to investigate and report on the progress of the work of the Pennsylvania Ship Canal Commission, and that no expenditure be made or obligations contracted by the State in connection with the excess of the appropriation heretofore made for its expenses.

LEGISLATIVE THANKS

Extended to All Who Aided the Johnston Flood Sufferers.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 20.—In the Senate to-day the following House resolution was concurred in: Resolved, That (the Senate concurring) the thanks of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be extended to the several Senators and members of the House who have aided the committee for the relief of Johnston and surrounding villages and to all contributors of money, food and clothing for this purpose, and to the several members of the committee who gave their personal services to the stricken people, enduring hardship and endangering their health in the work of wisely and tenderly administering to every form of human need, and in the preparation and despatch of communications with contrage, which it is desired to renew its orderly life and its accustomed and useful labor.

BILLS IN THE HOUSE.

Most of This Batch Are From Allegheny County Members.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 20.—The following bills were introduced in the House to-day: By Marshall, Allegheny, appropriating $5,000 to the Sewing Society of Pittsburgh; By Mitchell, Allegheny, to prohibit sale of adulterated food; By McCullough, Allegheny, for improvement of the Sewing Society of Pittsburgh; By Lytle, Huntington, fixing a time when introduced until Monday evening.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill providing for the sale of intoxicating liquors on Decoration Day was defeated.

STILL HAS HOPE.

Senator Neeb Thinks His Execution Bill Will Yet Be Passed.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 20.—Senator Neeb still has a faint hope that his bill to execute murderers in the penitentiaries will be passed. The bill is in the proper committee of the House, and the Senator and Representative Stocking, of Washington, whose bill, having a similar object in view, was

DEATH IN THE DARK.

Amid Fire and Smoke Men Are Crushed in a Railroad Tunnel By A DOUBLE COLLISION OF TRAINS.

A DOUBLE COLLISION OF TRAINS.

Several Cars Are Telescoped, Catch Fire and Are Consumed.

SIX LIVES LOST AND MANY INJURED

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—There was a collision at 7:30 o'clock this morning in the middle railway tunnel through Fourth avenue, near Eighty-fifth street, between two trains of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Company. One was the Havon local, leaving the Grand Central station at 7:20, and on into a train of empty cars, no one being in them, the employes being on their way to the yard at Mott Haven. The wreck soon took fire and burned fiercely, owing to the great draught in the tunnel.

Moreover, there was a second collision by a "light engine" going north from the yard running into the wreck. Six lives were lost through the first collision, and several persons were injured, all probably employes.

Up the Grand Central yard all trains pass to the left, and in whichever direction they may be going take the track on the left side of the tunnel. The Boston express, with a score or more of car-cleaners on board, was on the right-hand track, and the Havon local, when it reached Fifty-ninth street was running 30 miles an hour.

Fireman Wellington says he leaped out of the car and saw the light engine for the other as the engine approached them. At the Fifty-ninth street signal station both the "distant" and "home" lights were white, which signified that the block ahead was clear, and the Havon local was on the white, green and red signal. A New Haven accommodation train left the station at 7:20 on the track occupied by the other, and it might have struck the Havon local when it reached Fifty-ninth street was running 30 miles an hour.

The Atmosphere Thick With Smoke.

It left the Grand Central station at a speed of six miles an hour. The heavy atmosphere prevented the tunnel from clearing itself of smoke, and the Havon local, which was on the white, green and red signal. A New Haven accommodation train left the station at 7:20 on the track occupied by the other, and it might have struck the Havon local when it reached Fifty-ninth street was running 30 miles an hour.

The Engineer Unaware of the Collision.

Both trains came to a standstill within a quarter of a minute. The engineer of the express did not know when his train was struck. He felt the cars pulling very hard and the engine began to stop. The signal man at Eighty-sixth street put his head out of the window of his box and shouted: "All right! Go ahead!"

He thought the engineer was stopping because unable to see the signals, but the latter shouted back, as he pulled open the throttle: "I can't see a thing!" The sudden destruction of the train coaches had put out the automatic brake.

Fowler and Wellington jumped from their engine as it crashed into the smoker, and the former was slightly injured. He was held there by the wreck, and when he was freed he learned that only his front end was broken. The tunnel was filled with wreckage by the collision, and a moment after it was a mass of twisted iron and steel.

The Horror of Fire Hit Added.

The wrecked cars, a mass of broken timbers and splinters, were piled up under one of the roof openings of the tunnel, and, taking fire immediately, the smoke attracted the attention of the people in the neighborhood. Those that were near the wreck brought six engines, which soon began playing on the flames. Ladders were brought and let down through the opening, and, descending these, the firemen dug out the bodies of the dead and dying. Surgeons and priests joined the firemen down in the dark, smoky-filled tunnel, where the latter, braved the flames, and the firemen, who struggled bravely against all odds. Lanterns flashed and bobbed about in the murky gloom, and it was seen that one car had been crushed into the tunnel, and the other, which was on the right-hand track, had struck it, and the engine had jammed into it in front of it again and smashed the platform of both, and the wreckage of the third car, beyond, while the locomotive that had wrought the damage was jammed into the two telescoped cars, and all were in a blaze.

Dead, Roasting and Broken Bodies, in all sorts of pitiable attitudes, were among the debris of the interior. But one was not dead. Between the head of the locomotive and the body of the car, a fireman was crushed and his body was crushed. He was rescued alive, but was so badly crushed that he afterwards died in the hospital.

JAMES B. FLYNN, a machinist.

The list of injured included Daniel N. Colburn, a light coach who was injured internally; William D. Brown, a brakeman, badly crushed; and the driver of the Havon train named Rankin, also badly crushed.

Engineer Fowler was arrested and committed without bail. He and his fireman each declared the signals were out. Neither were seriously injured.

WORK OF THE HEALTH BUREAU.

Several Recommendations Made in the Sanitary Inspector's Annual Report.

James M. McEwen, chief Sanitary Inspector of the Bureau of Health filed his annual report yesterday. After detailing the great work done by the bureau, including the abatement of 8,845 nuisances, he calls attention to the fact that the city is still an abandoned coal mines under the Washington for drainage purposes, recommends additional garbage furnaces for the East End and Southside, and suggests legislation to prevent the erection of cow stalls and slaughter houses in the city.

PULLED THE WIFE'S HAIR.

Mrs. Koblentz Tells a Tale of Woe and Swears Out a Warrant.

Detective Robinson yesterday arrested Mary Dennison, who was taken to Central station and gave $1,000 bail for a hearing

THE INSIDE SECRETS

Of London's Sensational Gambling Scandal Given Out at Last.

PART OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

A Hostess Deliberately Plots to Ruin a Guest's Character.

THE ACCUSED HAS SOME DEFENSES

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The full particulars of London's high society card scandal, the announcement of which was first made in THE DISPATCH cables, are just coming to light. Sir William Gordon-Cumming, Bart., Lieutenant Colonel of the Scots Guards, is accused of having cheated at cards in a game with the Prince of Wales and 15 other representatives of English high life. The charge is made by five witnesses, who say they made the observations independently of each other.

As soon as these five persons came to the conclusion that Sir William had cheated, they put their heads together and laid the matter before the Prince of Wales, and he pledged the Prince to absolute secrecy on the condition that the accused Baronet should sign a paper to the effect that he would never again touch cards. Sir William signed the paper. All this happened last fall. For a few weeks secrecy was observed. Then the story of the incident leaked out. Finally the truth became known. Sir William was tried before a court of his fellow officers, and was compelled to send in his papers. Action was taken to prevent the Prince of Wales from returning to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty, Sir William will return to England, and as no one can be tried twice for the same offense, he need fear no further legal proceedings on this score. Results of the trial, the ladies concerned in the case must be politely overlooked. The officer principally implicated should immediately challenge his three accusers to a duel, and if they refuse to do so, they, giving himself up promptly to the local military authorities, he will be judged there by court-martial and condemned a few years of arrest. After entering his plea of guilty